Prof. Emeritus Dr. STEVEN SAMPSON A lecture about applied practice November 20, 2019

01

It is important² to keep your identity, remain anthropologist doing work outside the academia.

03

Think about short term and long term impacts.

02

There will be a lot of unpaid labor, but even a minor task might be useful in learning.

04

Don't be afraid³ to give answers you think are right. Many times client has the wrong problem and your job is to say it. However, you might get fired for that.

¹UNCERTAINTY
²IS IMPORTANT
³DON'T BE AFRAID

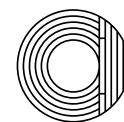

Most NGOs have encountered the issue of the uncertainty¹ of financial resources.

A possible solution is to aim for diversifying the sources of income. In our case, the income comes from four sources: local - municipal or national - funding, international funds, applied research practice and individual support.

INSIGHTS

Usually the project call guidelines identify and articulate an issue that needs to be addressed. Often the issues that are identifies are merely the symptoms of the problem behind them.

Hence during the project delivery and execution, it is important to remain critical and creative in learning to navigate between the project guidelines and the anthropological understanding of the problem.

ANTROPOLOGY DAY 2020

Social Action

August 19-20, 2020

It's important to follow ethical guidelines, be it working alone or in a group, as well to discuss the "ruleset": whom you can work for and whom - not, what are the cases in which you find it ethical to apply anthropological knowledge and in case you would rather not do it.

INSIGHTS

Being less known, applied ethnography as well as other qualitative methods are rare in Lithuania. Therefore it is important to show what might help to disclose and to popularize those methods via the practice.

01

The methods that are to be used, must be agreed upon and discussed with both the * and the research participants. For example, things such as what sort of interview will be conducted, how long it takes and what is to be done with the data, must be discussed.

Lect. ARTŪRS POKŠANS
Applied Anthropology Methods

04

It is useful to work in a versatile team which has mastered various research methods.

05

Usually applied projects are fast, short and intense research projects for public and private sectors.

06.

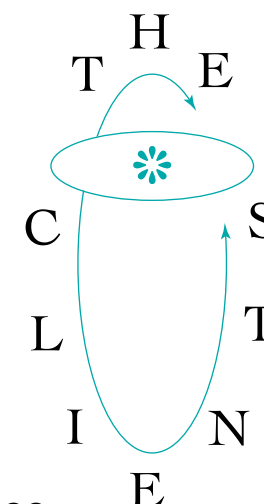

Research projects in the public sector are subject to the procedures of public procurement. Not only is it a complicated process, but it also requires to apply rapidly. It is important to choose what is worth your time, and what - isn't.

02

Sometimes * expect the impossible. Before starting out the research, one should be able to explain what could be expected from the study, and to present the results by the end of the study.

03

It is usually * that comes up with the research problem in case of an applied research. The research team selects methods that are most adequate and carry out the research.

01

Prior to initiating engaged work in a specific field or on a specific case, it is important to deliberate if that activity will not endanger, will not cause harm, and if it will be useful to the  within which and with which it is to be carried out.

 too, can be an environment, in and via which a change could be attained by both working in the field and via the exchange with others in the academia.

03

There are different ways to attain the change. For example, it can be initiated from within the power structures and bureaucratic institutions while working within them.

05

Anthropologists can employ various tools and formats in order to :

Prof. Dr. JONATHAN D. HILL

A lecture about Amazonian indigenous and advocacy_____ November 8, 2019

A public letter to the National Education Agency from the part of anthropos, addressing the representation of cultures in the geography textbooks designed for secondary schools.

The letter was followed by an invitation to conduct a seminar on the subject matter. Based on anthropological perspective, a chart indicating the proposals of non-ethnocentric and non-stereotypical representation was prepared for the authors and experts.

01

Anthropologists strive to understand the interrelation and complexity of diverse matters, thus taking a position might be complicated.

02

In advocacy, as well as in engaged and public practice, it is necessary to choose one's position.

It is not easy to explain anthropological approach, ideas and theories to people unfamiliar with this field.
